The Referee of the Sullivan-Kilrain Fight Under Bonds.

John L., Meanwhile, Continues His Chicago Spree.

His Disgusted Friends Will Try to Get Him Away To-Day.

JACKSON, Miss., July 15.—John Fitzpatrick, of New Orleans, referee in the Sullivan-Kilrain fight arrived here last night.

He went to the Governor's office this morning as soon as it was open, and informed the Governor that he had come to answer whatever charge there might be lodged against him for alleged violations of the laws of Mississippi.

John L. in Chicago.

He has a Bad Morning After a Night on the Levee.

CHICAGO, July 15.—About 4 o'clock this morning John L. Sullivan, who had been doing the levee, arose from a drunken sleep in Curley's saloon, stretched himself and started for the west side in company with two or three associates.

At 8 o'clock this morning he was still pouring cocktails, soups and straight down his canonicus gullet.

Shortly after 8 o'clock some friends who had been searching for him found him in a drinking resort and took him in tow.

No one knows now just in what place the gaucy giant is sleeping off the effects of the levee whiskey.

Sullivan's best friends in this city are disgusted with the way the big man is conducting himself.

This afternoon, when the pugilist has somewhat recovered from the effects of his delirium, they will attempt to get him out of town.

The route chosen will probably be through Canada, over the Grand Trunk Railroad.

Sullivan affects not to fear arrest, but his friends think it is best to be cautious for the present.

Sai or Brown, the bruiser who was laid out by a blow from John L.'s mighty fist last night, is swearing vengeance to-day, and it will not be surprising if blood were shed about the two men next.

Some of Brown's friends talk of having Sullivan arrested, but so far nothing has been done in that direction.

GOOD TRAMP, BUT POOR PRIEST.

Charlie Mitchell's Varied Disguises While Endeavoring to Dodge the Sheriff.

BUFFALO, July 15.—The attempt of "Rev. Edmund Edwards, Westminster, England," who registered at the Mansion House, to pass as a member of the church militant, was a dismal failure.

The clerical personage was quickly recognized by the sporting crier as Charlie Mitchell, Kilrain's trainer, who was endeavoring to smuggle himself inco, to New York, whence, he says, he will improve the first opportunity to depart from this blasted country for his own and the country's good.

Mitchell's experiences of his journey from New Orleans to Buffalo have not been cheering. He then looked into Baron Davis' saloon in Chicago Saturday night, the proprietor was on the point of ordering him out, so despicable was his appearance.

He resembled an animated scarecrow, but managed to make himself known in time.

He then exchanged his good clothes for a tramp's rag, and made his way into Chicago alone.

Mitchell said here that he had no idea where Kilrain was, but that when the party broke up the fighter was in excellent health.

THE STAKES FOR THE GREAT FIGHT.

Mitchell Has No Claim on Them and They Won't Be Paid To-Day.

The rumors that he had been springing lately to the effect that Charlie Mitchell is going to claim $2,000 of the $20,000 stakes for services rendered to Kilrain are all idle gossip.

Spotting men, when spoken to about this morning, laughed outright at what they termed Mitchell's nerve, and said they never "heard of such a proceeding."

It is not positively asserted that Mitchell will make such a claim, and should he do it, nothing will come of it, because Al Criddle, the stakeholder, will refuse to recognize him.

Mitchell must know, if he is at all familiar with the articles of agreement, that there was an after-claim inserted to the effect that no claims against the stake money would be recognized. This was signed by both men and by the backers of the men.

Al Criddle is expected to hold the money unless this clause was ticked out, and he will pay over the money to the backers of the man, whom Referee Fitzpatrick declares the winner.

The stakes will not be paid to-day.

None of the parties interested have received any notice regarding the payment, nor have they any idea when the money will be paid.

An Evening World man called on Mr. Chris Clark, the representative of Richard K. Fitzpatrick, to-day to learn if he had heard anything regarding Mitchell's intention.

"I have not heard anything," said he. "I don't see what Mitchell has to do with

AT THE CHURCH DOOR. Baritone Kellmer Arrested on His Wife's Complaint.

Why St. John's Handsome Vocalist Failed to Sing.

Locked Up All Night in a Cold Cell Awaiting Bail.

This morning George A. Kellmer, of 80 Hull street, Brooklyn, a fascinating baritone in the choir of St. John's Church, was arrested by Justice Thomas J. Kenna, of the Third District Civil Court, on the charge of abandoning his wife, Carrie C. Kellmer.

Mr. Kellmer pleaded not guilty, and as he was unable to meet a bond of $500 for trial, was returned to the jail. His trial will come off next Monday before Justice Kenna.

Kellmer is regarded as a fine-looking man by the ladies and has something of a pull in society circles, where his good looks and fine voice command him. He has appeared in several operas in Brooklyn, among others in the dear old canteen of "Pinafore," in which he made a success.

Mr. Kellmer, who was Miss Carrie C. Clark, says that George has not contributed to her support for a long time.

This action of Mr. Kellmer is an offset to proceedings begun by the fascinating George, who charges his wife with misconduct and asking for a divorce. Mr. Kellmer has in his possession a letter from George Fisher, of 347 Pacific street, whose value to him is not entirely due to its literary style.

Mrs. Kellmer is a bright, attractive woman, who also is a good society. George was arrested at her instance last night by Officer Egol, of the Commission on of Charles, just as he was about entering St. John's Church for the evening service.

Officer Egol's service of the warrant had the baritone and religious service, and Kellmer took his tartarous voice to the Sixteenth Precinct last night and kept it in a cell.

This morning his handsome face and the cheerful expression of his eyes were seen in the long procession of "drunks" which were gathered on Saturday and Sunday.

He will, it is expected, expose his voice to the damp, confined air of a cell for a week more, probably not to its advantage.

OF PASSION AND DESPAIR.

THE TALE THAT MAY UNFOLD FROM THE TRAGEDY AT MUNICH.

BY CABLE TO THE PRESS NEWS ASSOCIATION. LONDON, July 15.—The double suicide of the Baroness Acton and Count Waldemar Blumenthal, at Munich, causes a profound sensation here, where the lady was well known.

The cause is as yet enveloped in mystery. The Baroness was not related to the Count. The circumstances of the tragedy, when known, will probably reveal a remarkable tale of passion and despair.

DIEU, WARDEN FINN The Commissioners of Charities and Correction Have Replaced Him.

And with One Voice They Say It Was Not for Politics.

No Charges Against Finn, but General Reforms Seemed Necessary.

The Commissioners of Charities and Correction held an executive session early this morning, the outcome of which was the adoption of this resolution:

Resolved, That J. W. Ledwith be appointed Warden of the District Prisons in place of James Finn, who is hereby relieved from duty.

The initials stand for Henry H. Porter, Charles E. Simmons and Edward C. Sheehy, the three Commissioners, all of whom were present.

The session was a secret one, and reporters were excluded. It lasted about fifteen minutes, and when it was over Commissioner Simmons came out, glanced nervously around and made a break for his carriage, which was waiting for him at the side door.

A reporter of the Evening World overtook him in his mad haste and asked him on what grounds the Commissioners had sent their request to the Warden to resign last Saturday.

"We thought it best that there should be a change," he replied, "and requested him to send his resignation because it would be for the best interests of the party—I mean the Department."

"Are there any charges against Warden Finn?"

"No, I can't say that there are any charges. I don't want to make any charges. We were simply dissatisfied with the way he was conducting the affairs of his office and removed him."

"Is it true that outside political influence was brought to bear?"

"Nothing of the sort, sir. The Board can remove a Warden at any time. It is only done in the interest of reform and a better administration of the Department."

President Porter was somewhat more communicative. Said he: "Finn was not by any means as efficient as he once was, and we were very much dissatisfied with the way he was running things. We didn't propose to make any charges against him, but the truth of the matter is that he has been too lenient toward the keepers. He has allowed them all sorts of privileges, and has failed to reform various abuses that existed. The service will be benefited by the change."

"Wasn't the action of the Board rather sudden?"

"Not at all. We have been considering the matter for some time past, and came to our decision only after due and careful deliberation."

"There is such a thing as a man's being in official disgrace, and that was the case with Finn. If he expects to have any charges brought against him he will be disappointed."

"How about the statement that Alderman Dwyer's influence was the cause of his removal?"

"Not a bit of truth in it, nor in the statement that the office is a sinecure. What we want is a young and active man in that position, and I am sure that we have found the right man in Mr. Ledwith."

"Has he had any experience in prison management?"

"I know and I don't think that is necessary. He is recommended by Lauman & Kemp, wholesale druggists, of William street, with whom he was connected for a number of years as clerk, and by John Andrews, of the firm of Andrews, Gulick & Silcock, of No. 144 Chambers street."

The letters from these gentlemen were attached to the resignation of Warden Finn. Mr. Ledwith's good character and industrious habits.

Commissioner Sheehy, who was credited with the suggestion of appointing Mr. Ledwith, a clerk in the Harlem Court, for the position, said:

"I wanted Bergen, but we thought it was best to have a man from down town. I don't think the thing is as serious as blood in the department."

"When the Mayor appointed me to this position, he told me that he wanted me to go ahead and make any reforms I might think necessary, and said that he had no file in the District Court Prisons. I simply carried out the duties of the position, and I don't think I was in the least bit responsible for the present situation."

"In what way has Warden Finn failed in his duty?"

"He gives privileges to keepers and permits them to do as they please. He keeps prisoners in the interest of certain counsel and all that sort of thing."

LAST EDITION BLAINE DENIES IT.

He Has Not Resigned His Portfolio of State.

While the Resignation Report Was Circulating from Washington.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.)
BAR HARBOR, Me., July 15.—Secretary James G. Blaine denies with his own lips the latest story of his resignation, which was sent out from Washington yesterday.

The Secretary is enjoying his vacation here very thoroughly.

He was visited yesterday by Senator Hale, with whom he held a conference last night.

The story of Blaine's resignation was telegraphed yesterday to the Herald of this city and appeared also in Washington.

It was stated that the resignation was to take effect Sept. 1.

The report was discredited among the other Cabinet officers and among Mr. Blaine's friends generally. These declared that nothing but ill health would lead the Secretary to give up his portfolio, and that his health was never better than now.

The old Seward mansion in Washington is being rapidly reconstructed according to the plans decided upon by Mr. Blaine, and Walker Blaine is spending his vacation at the capital in order that he may superintend the work.

The resignation story received some color, according to Washington despatches, from the numerous reports of coldness between the President and the name of Carl Meyer, of New York, who was appointed Secretary of the Interior.

It was said that the Secretary's pride was hurt and that he could not retain his place under such circumstances.
